April 2104

We were all hoping that winter winds were behind us; but a late March blizzard treated us all to another snow day. Here are some other recent “treats” at Truro Central School...

Construction Zone

Senora Waldo's Spanish classes have been working hard in a construction zone. Instead of 2x4s, hammers and nails, students have been transforming cardboard boxes into an elaborate two-story house complete with furniture, textiles and accessories made from duct tape and recycled materials.

Each room was planned, decorated and labeled by a different grade as a way to teach vocabulary.

The house is on display in the TCS Lobby. Stop by and take a look at it!

Reading Fun

Truro Central School students love to read! We celebrated Read Across America and Dr. Seuss' birthday in early March. This annual celebration includes a Green Eggs and Ham Breakfast, classroom and office door decorating and books for each student from their teachers. Creating and wearing Silly Hats is another favorite tradition shared by students and teachers alike! More photos can be found at <http://truromass.org/ReadAcrossAmerica.htm>

Read Across America Day is also the kick-off for our annual TCS Reading Challenge. This year's theme, "Be A Reading Champion", is tied into our school theme for 2013-14: Be A Champion. From March until the end of May, students and staff challenge themselves and each other to read 1,000 books as a school. Individual and school prizes can be earned and progress is tracked in the school library on a Wall of Champions. You can track our progress on our website at <http://truromass.org/ReadingChallenge.htm>
